

Bacon (Classic Reprint)

OtH. (i Los A ngeles, Cal. PREFACE. In preparing this sketch it is needless to say how deeply I am indebted to Mr. Spedding and Mr. Ellis, the last editors of Bacon swritings, the very able and painstaking commentators, the one on Bacon slife, the other on his philosophy. It is impossible to overstate the affectionate care and high intelligence and honesty with which Mr. Spedding has brought together and arranged the materials for an estimate of Bacon scharacter. In the result, in spite of the force and ingenuity of much of his pleading, I find myself most reluctantly obliged to differ from him ;it seems to me to be a case where the French saying, cited by Bacon in one of his commonplace books, holds good Par trop se dehattre, la verite se perdy But this does not diminish the debt of gratitude which all who are interested about Bacon must owe to Mr. Spedding. I wish also to acknowledge the assistance which I have received from Mr. Gardiner s History of England and Mr. Fowler s edition of the Novum Organum ;and not least from M. do licmusat swork on Bacon, which seems to me the most complete and the most just estimate both of Bacon schar Fromus: edited by Mrs. H.
