

Collapse: Philosophical Research and Development 2012: Speculative Realism Volume II

The first published work to have introduced the new philosophy of speculative realism, Collapse 2 features a selection of essays by some of the foremost young philosophers at work today, together with new work from artists and filmmakers, and searching interviews with leading scientists. Against the tide of institutional balkanisation and specialisation, this volume testifies to a defiant reanimation of the most radical philosophical problematics: the status of the scientific object, metaphysics and its end, the prospects for a revival of realism, the possibility of phenomenology, transcendence and the divine, the nature of causation, the necessity of contingency-both through a fresh reappropriation of the philosophical tradition and through an openness to its outside. The breadth of philosophical thought in this volume is matched by the surprising and revealing thematic connections that emerge between the philosophers and scientists who have contributed.
