

Leading in High Heels: 3 Steps to Personal and Professional Excellence

Our world would be a better place if we had more women in leadership positions. Women are generally less domineering and confrontational than men striving to reach consensus or agreement, or at least accommodation, rather than simply imposing their will. Women tend to prefer a more horizontal type of management instead of a vertical approach; that is, women focus more on benefit to the group rather than on their own personal benefit. As the maxim goes, if you help a woman, you are helping a community, because whatever she gains, she usually shares with her family and with her community.
