Excerpt from International Review of Agricultural Economics: Monthly Bulletin of Economic and Social Intelligence; Table of Contents, 1921

The International Institute of Agriculture was established under the International Treaty of 7 June 1905, which was ratified by forty governments. Twenty-two other governments have since adhered to the Institute. It is a Government institution in which each country is represented by delegates. The Institute is composed of a General Assembly and a Permanent Committee. The Institute, always confining its attention to the international aspect of the various questions concerned, shall: (a) collect, study and publish as promptly as possible, statistical, technical, or economic information concerning farming, vegetable and animal products, trade in agricultural produce, and the prices prevailing in the various markets; (b) communicate the above information as soon as possible to those interested; (c) indicate the wages paid for farm work; (d) record new diseases of plants which may appear in any part of the world, showing the regions infected, the progress of the diseases, and if possible, any effective remedies; (e) study questions concerning agricultural co-operation, insurance and credit from every point of view; collect and publish information which might prove of value in the various countries for the organization of agricultural co-operation, insurance and credit; (f) submit for the approval of the various governments, if necessary, measures for the protection of the common interests of farmers and for the improvement of their condition, utilizing for this purpose all available sources of information, such as resolutions passed by international or other agricultural congresses and societies, or by scientific and learned bodies, etc.
