

Wild Magic (The Magic Series Book 4)

Wild Magic What if you could cast a spell to help you do your everyday job? But . . . what if that job included casting fireballs and lightning bolts and destroying evil magic items? And your soul mate turns out to be a wild talent with abilities neither of you dreamed of? And you're up against the immensely horrible Cataclysm Stone? Within the world of magic practitioners exist a group called Defenders and Swords. Their purpose: to find and destroy items of evil magic. Irene Sabel is a Sword, new to her blade and anxious to prove herself. On her first mission to recover a powerful crystal of ancient evil--The Cataclysm Stone--from its practitioner users, she encounters DEA Agent Jim Tylan. Part of a law-enforcement task force but also for personal reasons, Jim is after the same people for drugs and weapons trafficking. When Jim and Irene come together, they find that each is more than appears on the surface. Irene is surprised to discover that Jim is a wild talent, in whom magic abilities spontaneously occur. Jim is astonished to realize that he can cast spells and Irene and her team can actually destroy evil magic items. The biggest revelation of all concerns both Jim and Irene. They are, in fact, ready or not, soul mates, and the soul-mate imperative is lurking, determined to bring them together. The villains have other plans for them, ones that will test Irene and Jim's new found magic powers--and their new found love.
